Hi Internet,

Summary: It was observed that the skype has a malloc(): memory corruption bug while you share some media/file with someone during a call.* * *  Tested on: Linux zero 4.15.0-29-generic #31-Ubuntu SMP Tue Jul 17 15:39:52 UTC 2018 x86_64 x86_64 x86_64 GNU/Linux (Ubuntu 18.04 LTS)
*Product affected: Skype for linux (skypeforlinux_8.27.0.85_amd64.deb)

Steps to reproduce this issue:

1. Open Skype
2. Call anyone
3. During the call try sharing the media or files to the same person
4. The Skype gets crash.

While on a call with one of my colleague, I tried sharing a file which froze my skype and then it gets crash. However moving further I tried to debug it with `gdb` and this is what i got.

Cool, so when i read the backtrace, I understood that, this might be a memory corruption in `malloc()` .

So basically, the memory allocator allocates pages of memory at once for use of programs, and it gives you a pointer within them. Since this files which i am trying to share may be larger for skype to handle during the call (PS: I was just sharing an jpg file in this case which was of 800kB). But for skype if a larger program is allocating larger amounts of memory and writing further past the end of your allocated space, then you'll end up attempting to write into unallocated memory and may cause a memory corruption.

Being a fan of responsible disclosure, I submitted this to Microsoft on 8 August 2018, but MS says "Upon investigation, we have determined that this submission does not meet the bar for security servicing" 🙄

Okay, but I passed on this message to skype team on twitter, and they looked into this!

At last, this was patched on Skype version 8.29.0.41 on Linux.
